Master of Science in Educational Leadership

Administration Concentration For Aspiring Administrators

Concordia University's nationally-accredited School of Education offers advanced professional training for leadership positions in P-12 schools through the Master of Science in Educational Leadership degree. The program is approved by the Michigan Department of Education for principal preparation. Our curriculum, aligned with the Michigan Standards, centers on a three-point mission to prepare educators who are servant leaders, reflective practitioners, and committed to life-long learning.

The School of Education at Concordia University is committed to building on your dedication through a comprehensive learning experience. The cohort model places you in courses with your colleagues and peers, allowing you to grow and develop together and build on each other's experiences and skills. Courses are designed to meet once per week at a convenient location near you because the School of Education understands the busy schedule of a teacher.

Whether you are seeking a master's degree or advanced certification in school administration, you can further your professional development and reignite your passion for continual learning with Concordia University.

Certificate of School Administration Studies

A certificate option for educators who have completed an earned master degree in a field of education yet would like to be eligible for a voluntary K-12 Building Administrator, principal license (20 or more credits). The School of Education determines your personal plan of study for the Certificate of School Administration Studies.

Flexible Format- The School of Education offers accelerated courses to local teachers and educators on Concordia's Ann Arbor campus and at many off site locations throughout the State of Michigan. A preset sequence of graduate courses is arranged at a convenient location, a local school or district service building classroom, specifically by Concordia University. The accelerated graduate courses are offered consecutively during Concordia's fall, spring, and summer semesters with three credit courses scheduled in eight week blocks. A study break is typically scheduled in July and August, and an advisor assists students in developing a plan of study to meet all degree or certificate requirements.

Accreditation- The School of Education at Concordia University has been accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) and approved by the Michigan Department of Education for the preparation of educational personnel.
